

Anissa Mitchell, LCSW
Chief Program Officer

Anissa has a master's degree in social work and is a Licensed Clinical Social Worker. She has over 25 years experience working as a medical social worker in a variety of settings.

Ten years ago, Anissa had an opportunity to work exclusively within Parkinson's disease running an outreach center and found what some would say is her calling. In fact, she has been described as a Parkinson's passionary- a person with passion and vision for those impacted by Parkinson's disease. Anissa has a special interest in supporting the family network. Not long after starting her work in Parkinson's her own mother was diagnosed. Anissa has developed and facilitated a variety of groups and educational programs for both persons with Parkinson's and their family members, and loves using creativity to empower others.
